The total annual imports into Mexico, reduced to the standard of American gold, amount in gross to $16,640,000. There is, however, considerable contraband trade carried on all along the American frontier, particularly across the Rio Grande. The value of goods smuggled into Mexico, has been computed at about $1,000. per annum, and there is probaa million and a half of Mexisilver dollars smuggled out of country each year. Travellers leaving the country are not permitted to take with them over $99.99 in Mexican silver. Any so unlucky as to have over this amount will have the whole confiscated, and there is no remedy. The law permits its seizure, and the Mexicans are not seizure, and the Mexicans are not slow to act, taking it by force. The average exports from Mexico for a number of years has not reached $25,000,000, and this is mostly in eagle dollars. Quite a trade is springing up all along the coast of Yucatan in Sisal bemp The principal port, or rather open road The principal port, of rather is Progreso. stead, where this is taken is Progreso. The plant is called benequen. hemp costs there from 64 to 62 cents per pound. It is of the same family as the pulque plant before mentioned. There is still another plant of the same specles called pita, yielding a stronger and better class of fibre than the henequen. This trade will increase the exports, but enerally speaking nothing is now exported from Mexico except silver. American drafts last February were worth a premium of 20 per cent. in the City of Mexico. Mexican dollars at Havana exchange for American gold at 90c., while in New York they are worth but about 85c.

There is a great amount of romance about Mexico. The reports as to the great wealth of that country are greatly exaggerated. The amount of work laid out by the United States to be executed in Mexico, in the mat ter of railroads, amounts to over $100,000,-000. It will be curious to observe who will make and lose in this speculation. INGENIERO.

That was an achievement he meant only for the black man at very long range away down South, and when the colored brother was ready to greet him as a brother, adorned with blue, and star, and club, and to dwell in unity and love with his pale-faced fellow-official, the deep-rooted Republicanism of Policeman Jordan oozed out of him at every pore, and in utter despair he divested himself of his uniform, dismantled his glitter-ing star, returned his commission with contempt, and retired to private life, murmur-ing by the way-"No nigger in mine !"
